Get Protection From Unintended Pregnancy With Contraceptives

Contraception, also known as birth control, is a device or medication used to prevent unwanted pregnancy or childbirth. It refers to prevention of sperm fertilization into an egg. In this era of rapidly increasing population, the use of various contraceptive measures is essential.

History of Contraceptives

The history of contraception dates back to the discovery of the connection between pregnancy and coitus. The ancient means of contraceptives included pessaries, coitus interruptus and abortifacient.

- 1. Pessaries – It was a vaginal suppository made of various acidic substances, which was later lubricated with honey or oil. Such a method was believed to kill sperms. The Asian women used oiled paper as the cervical cap, while the Europeans used beeswax for this purpose. The introduction of condoms was witnessed in the 17th century. It was then used both as a means of contraception as well as to avoid syphilis.
- 2. Coitus Interruptus – This method involves the withdrawal of the penis from the vagina prior to ejaculation. For the successful completion of this method, self-control in the men is very important.
- 3. Abortifacient – In the past, women used to drink arsenic, mercury and other toxic substances to prevent pregnancy. Greek history provides the instances of women drinking the water used by blacksmiths to cool metals, for this purpose. Many herbalists believed the use of black cohosh tea as an abortifacient for contraception.

Various ways to perform Contraception

1. Physical methods – This method includes a variety of ways. One such way is physically preventing the sperms from entering the vagina. Other methods include: surgical alteration of male and female reproductive organs to induce sterility, making woman's reproductive tract unfriendly to the sperms and so on.
2. Hormonal methods – These methods provide a variety of delivery methods. They include combined oral contraceptive pill, patch, combination of synthetic oestrogens and progestins, contraceptive vaginal ring and so on. Progestin is another method used as a contraceptive.
3. Emergency contraception – Copper intrauterine devices are used as emergency contraception. It is inserted within five days of unprotected sex or birth control failure.
4. Barrier methods – In this method, a physical impediment is placed inside the female reproductive organ to prevent the movement of sperms. The most common barrier method is the usage of male and female Condoms.
5. Surgical sterilization – This method prevents sperm from joining the unfertilized egg.
6. Induced abortion – Drugs are used to prevent pregnancy. Herbs can also be used for abortion.
7. Intrauterine methods – These contraceptive devices are placed inside the uterus. They are either copper-containing or progestogen-releasing.
8. Behavioral methods – It involves the regulation of timing or means of intercourse to prevent entering of sperm into the vagina, when an egg is present.

Know about Condoms

A condom is the safest device to enjoy a satisfying sex life. Condoms have been in use for over 400 years. They have been most popular since the nineteenth century, with more awareness spreading among the people. Condoms prevent unwanted pregnancies and the spreading of sexually transmitted infections such as syphilis, gonorrhoea and HIV.

Condoms are usually made of latex and other materials. Now, female condoms are also available in the market. They are available in varied colours, styles and are also available as lubricated, dry and with spermicide. While female condoms are a little expensive, most people usually prefer male condoms.

Different types of Condoms

- 1. Synthetic condoms - The most common non-latex condoms are made from polyurethane. Condoms are also made from other synthetic materials like AT-10 resin and polyisoprene. Polyurethane conducts heat, is not very sensitive to temperature and ultraviolet rays, is not allergic, can be used with oil-based lubricants and is odorless.
- 2. Natural Latex condoms – Latex condoms have spectacular elastic properties. They can be stretched in excess of 800% before it is broken. Moreover, its tensile strength exceeds 30 Mpa.
- 3. Spermicidal condoms – The spermicidal condoms are manufactured by lubricating condoms with a small amount of nonoxynol-9, which is a spermicidal chemical.
- 4. Lambskin condoms – Lambskin condoms are considered to be made from one of the oldest condom materials- lambskin, which is made from lamb intestines. These condoms possess the ability of producing more body warmth and tactile sensation than any other condoms. They are also non-allergic than most other condoms.

Condom's Effectiveness:

- 1. Prevents unwanted pregnancy – Condoms are one of the easiest and best ways to prevent unwanted pregnancies. More and more people are procuring awareness on the varied positive uses of condoms and have included them as a part of their happy married life.
